Abwoli Y. Banana

Professor in the Department of Forestry, Biodiversity and Tourism. He holds BSc Forestry from Makerere University, MSc. in Wood Science and Technology from University of California (USA) and PhD from the Australian National University, Canberra. His teaching and research interests include Forest Products and Institutions (rules) affecting governance, access and use of forestry resources. He has taught forestry at Makerere University for the last 40 years. He was Deputy Dean, Faculty of Forestry and Nature conservation (1999-2005) and Head of Department of Forest Products Engineering (1999-2011). He is a founding member of the International Forestry Resources research program (IFRI) established in 1993 to understand how forest governance arrangements and institutions shape forest conditions livelihoods outcomes of forest adjacent communities. He has over 40 publications, won 10 research grants and produced 13 policy briefs.