

Fred Babweteera

Associate Professor in the Department of Forestry, Biodiversity and Tourism. He holds DPhil and MSc (Distinction) in Forest Science, Policy and Management from University of Oxford. He has over 20 years experience in teaching and managing multidisciplinary conservation programmes around the Budongo landscape. He is a member of the Commonwealth Forestry Association and International Union of Forest Research Organisation Governing Councils. He is also a member of IUCN Species Survival Commission Primate Specialist Group and the International Forestry Review Journal Editorial Board. He has published over 15 papers and won more than 5 research grants.