

Abraham R. Mwesigye

Lecturer in the Department of Forestry, Biodiversity and Tourism. He holds a PhD in Environmental Science from Makerere University, Uganda, Master's of Science in Environmental Science from the University of Nottingham, United Kingdom and BSc Forestry from Makerere University. He has research interests in soil and water sciences with focus on contaminated land, forest soil dynamics, water contamination, human exposure to environmental contaminants and risk assessments. He teaches courses in soil science, soil and water conservation, forest soils, wetlands and aquatic ecosystems management.